A short moral story

One windy morning, a little sparrow found a thirsty plant beside a garden wall. The sparrow could not carry much water, so it brought a few drops in its beak.

A rabbit laughed and said, “Those tiny drops will never be enough!” The sparrow replied, “I can still do my little part.”

Soon, other birds and animals joined in. Together, they watered the plant. After some days, it grew strong and green.

Moral: Small acts of kindness can make a big difference.
